The goal of the workshop is to improve ongoing work prior to publication, so papers must not be under review by a journal. Attendance is limited to 20-25 early career scholars and selection for attendance is competitive. It will be based on the novelty, quality and rigour of the research.

About UK~IRC - The UK Innovation Research Centre (UK~IRC) is a collaborative initiative for cutting-edge research and knowledge hub activity in innovation. It is a joint venture between the Centre for Business Research, University of Cambridge, and Imperial College Business School.

We ensure that new research on innovation has the greatest effect on policy and practice, exploring the relationship between innovation and business performance, to understand how this affects the national economy and the individual organisation.

This workshop is free with some accommodation funding available. If you would like to apply for this, please indicate in your application

CALL FOR PAPERS

This intensive 2 day workshop for early career scholars working on the frontiers of innovation research aims to help researchers develop their work through discussion with scholars in their field.

Attendees will benefit from feedback and comments from leading scholars (Alan Hughes, Martin Kilduff, Jaideep Prabhu, Bruce Tether, Ammon Salter, Mike Wright, among others). It will also be an invaluable opportunity to meet editors of top journals (Administrative Science Quarterly, Strategic Management Journal, Cambridge Journal of Economics, Industry & Innovation).

The workshop is designed for researchers in the early stage of their academic career. Original research topics and novel methods or approaches, as well as demonstrating interdisciplinarity, are particularly encouraged.
