Editors' Note

The season of job searching and job opening has returned. H.E.N is the must-see source for new heterodox jobs. If you have a job for heterodox economists, send us an advert. There is no cost for including a job advert in the Newsletter (we often get a query about the cost of job announcement).

As for the upcoming ASSA annual meetings, we have a couple of things to remind you. Firstly, if you have not registered, you’d better do it as soon as possible (go to: http://www.aeaweb.org/Annual_Meeting/index.php). Also note that there may be a picket line at the Hyatt Regency, the headquarter of the ASSA. You can avoid crossing the picket line by requesting the ASSA administration that you will be picking up your registration packet at Swissotel or Palmer House. The request form is found here.

Secondly, there will be a pedagogy and course design workshop for young heterodox economists (graduate students and untenured faculty) organized by Geoffrey Schneider (Bucknell University) on January 5, 2012 at Roosevelt University, Chicago. Check this out here and contact your own heterodox association (for example, URPE, AFEE, AFTT, ASE, and AJES) for funding your trip to Chicago in January.

In spirit of solidarity, we will not repost Huffington Post’s links in the Heterodox Economics Newsletter. This is because of the boycott of the Huffington Post by AFL-CIO affiliates unions, such as the National Writers’ Union, UAW 1981. For further information on this go to: http://www.nwu.org/boycott-huffington-post.

Finally, we'd like to call your attention to the protest that started last week to Occupy Wall Street. To protest bailouts, lack of jail time, etc., this group has established "residence" at Liberty Square in order to take back "our country" from financial interests. You can support the cause by donating food or money. Use the link provided to find out how. There is also a continuous live video stream on the web site. Keep it up!

In solidarity,

Tae-Hee Jo and Ted Schmidt, Editors

CALL FOR PAPERS

AHE-FAPE-IIPPE 2012 Joint Conference

July 5-8 2012 | Paris, France
Political Economy and the Outlook for Capitalism

Jointly sponsored by Association for Heterodox Economics (AHE), French Association of Political Economy (FAPE), International Initiative for Promoting Political Economy (IIPPE).

The full Call for Papers is online HERE.

Papers can be submitted to any of the three associations. This joint conference is a very important one in that it is designed to show that pluralist-heterodox economics is alive, well, and active and there is unity among pluralist and heterodox organizations. This is important because in Europe and especially in France, the state organizes economics and the appointment of economists in a way that generally excludes heterodox economists. So the conference is also a visible demonstration of the importance and vitality of pluralist heterodox economics.

The Conference is supported by: European Research Network on Money, Banking and FinanceEuro-Mediterranean Economic Research Development (DREEM)l'Association pour le Développement des Etudes Keynésiennes (ADEK), American Journal of Economics and Sociology (AJES). It would be nice if other heterodox associations in Europe and around the world, various heterodox economics journals, publishers that produce heterodox economics books, and even departments that promote heterodox economics would show their support by making at least a small contribution to the conference. These contributions will be used to cover in part the travel, lodging, and food costs and conference fees for graduate/post-graduate students and paper presenters that need funding to participate in the conference. The importance of wide support is that it shows the extent that pluralist-heterodox economics exists—and also show that in this age of individuals it is possible to get by with a little help from friends. If you—that is associations, journals, publishers, and departments—are interested in making a contribution, please e-mail Fred Lee (leefs@umkc.edu) or Bruno Tinel (bruno.tinel@univ-paris1.fr) or Cédric Durand (cdurand@ehess.fr).

Paraphrasing various protest songs, I [Fred Lee] would like to see the CSE, AFEE, URPE, ASE, EAEPE, SHE, JSPE CJE, JPKE, ROPE, MESharpe, Routledge, UMKC, SOAS, Bremen, and many others in the lecture halls, on the street, in the café, and following Liberty to building a better heterodox economics.

Important dates:

- Deadline for abstracts of individual papers and panels: 31st January 2012 (Authors will be notified about our decision by the 15th of March 2012)
- Deadline for registration (with reduced fee): 14th May 2012
- Deadline for full refereed papers: 14th May 2012
- Deadline for non-refereed full papers: 1st June 2012st January 2012 (Authors will be notified about our decision by the 15th of March 2012)
- Deadline for registration (with reduced fee): 14th May 2012

ASE at Eastern Economic Association 2012 Conference

March 9 - 11, 2012 | Boston, USA

Mark D. White, Eastern Regional Director of ASE, invites you to submit abstracts and/or session proposals for the Association for Social Economics sessions at the 2012 Eastern Economic Association meetings to be held at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel in Boston, MA, March 9-11, 2012.

Proposals dealing with the concerns of social economics are welcome, whether theoretical or practical, methodological or policy-oriented, or anything in between. As always, Mark is particularly interested in papers exploring the intersection of economics and ethics (which fits under the social economics umbrella), as well as economics and philosophy in general.

You do not have to be a member of ASE to participate in the EEA sessions, though if you are not a member, you are encouraged to consider joining. (In fact, even if you choose not to participate in the meetings, it is a good idea to consider joining!).

Please send your abstracts or session ideas by Monday, October 17, to Mark White at profmdwhite@hotmail.com. Also, feel free to ask about possible topics or themes, or about the meetings in general. The Eastern Economic Association meeting have always been very open to alternative approaches and viewpoints, as well as a wonderful forum for innovative ideas.

ASE at Midwest Economics Association 2012 Conference

March 30 - April 1, 2012 | Hilton Orrington, Evanston, IL

THEME: Teaching Social Economics in the Real World

Efforts to make economics more relevant to real world issues should be at the forefront of discussions and debates in the field, especially in the aftermath of the economic meltdown in most of the industrialized economies of the world. Yet, there remains a chasm between the world our students experience and textbook representations of the economy. Social economics is well-positioned to chart a new pedagogy based on critical engagement with diverse real-world economies. Social economic analysis seeks to understand the normative basis of economic behavior embedded in particular cultural, social and historical contexts. We encourage papers that explore ways to bring social economics into the classroom and that apply social economic perspectives to topics such as economic inequality, gender bias, racial disparities, uneven development, environmental sustainability, market failure, and the ethics of growth.

While we welcome the submission of proposals on all topics in social economics, we especially encourage papers from researchers and teachers that address the proposed panel theme and related topics in social economics.

Please submit your affiliation, contact information, paper title and abstract (up to 250 words) to Bruce Pietrykowski, Midwest ASE Regional Director at bpie@umd.umich.edu no later than October 3, 2012.

Please refer to the Midwest Economic Association web site for further information regarding the 2012 MEA Conference: http://web.grinnell.edu/MEA/

ASE at Western Economic Association International 2012 Conference

June 29-July 3, 2012 | San Francisco, CA

ASE has been invited to form several panels under its own organizational name. For details of the conference, fees, specifics as to submitting papers, see the WEAI website at http://www.weai.org/AnnualConf. Note that conference fees are $155 (possibly $160) for ASE members presenting papers (the same as WEAI members).
All submissions are to be sent to John F. Henry, Department of Economics, University of Missouri-Kansas City for initial screening. Submissions are to be sent via email to henryjf@umkc.edu. Please follow WEAI guidelines when preparing your paper.

Cover sheet with paper presenter’s name, professional affiliation, mailing address, phone and fax numbers, e-mail address, academic degrees held; same information for coauthors; paper title (limit 60 characters and aspaces); and paper topic area (three appropriate codes from the JEL Classification System for Journal Articles).

Abstract of 350 words or less.

All proposed papers must be submitted by November 30, 2011 to allow time to organize panels and submit the information to Joyce Rosendahl, WEAI organizer by December 15. The November 30 deadline is firm.

Please consider participating in this conference as such involvement will increase ASE's visibility.

Conference on Economic Philosophy

21-22 June 2012 | Lille, France

Reminder of the upcoming deadline to submit abstracts to the forthcoming Conference on Economic Philosophy co-organized by Sciences-Po Lille, CLERSÉ-CNRS and Cahiers d’ économie politique (Papers in Political Economy) that will take place in Sciences-Po Lille the 21 and 22 June 2012.

The submission deadline is October 15 and acceptance will be announced on December 17. The official languages of the Conference are French and English. To see the call for papers please click on the following link: http://iep.univ-lille2.fr/index.php?id=118. Please send an abstract (no more than 500 words) of the proposed contribution by Email to philoeco@sciencespo-lille.eu in English or French, with a brief curriculum vita, postal and email addresses.

The ESHET Istanbul Conference: Special Issue of EJHET

The preparations of the Special Issue of the European Journal of the History of Economic Thought devoted to the ESHET Conference in Istanbul are now underway. We are therefore writing to invite participants of the conference to submit their papers for consideration for the special issue of EJHET. The Special Issue has no theme and all papers presented at the conference will be considered.

Please note that the competition will be fierce as the number of papers in the special issue is very limited indeed. Please also note the following:

• 1. Papers presented at the conference are not automatically considered for the Special Issue. The editors will only consider those papers which have been especially submitted for the Special Issue. We will not consider papers which have not been presented at the conference.
• 2. Submitted papers will undergo a process of review by anonymous referees in line with the regular procedures of EJHET.
• 3. Full papers (including a short abstract and a list of up to five key-words) should be submitted no later than 31st October 2011 to a.witztum@londonmet.ac.uk
• 4. Those who are not native English speakers are asked to have their papers checked by a native English speaker before submission. It is in the best interest of every author to deliver his or her paper written in a readily intelligible and accessible manner.

History of Economics as Culture 4th Workshop

March 9, 2012 | University of Cergy-Pontoise, France

This is to announce that we are organizing on behalf of the H2S (History of Social Science) group, Economix (CNRS UMR 7235) and THEMA (CNRS UMR 8184), the fourth annual workshop on the “history of ‘economics as culture’ (Histoire culturelle des savoirs économiques)” to be held Friday, March 9th, 2012 at the University of Cergy-Pontoise (near Paris, France). Since its first installment in 2009, this workshop is bringing together scholars from different disciplines such as economics, history, art and literary theory, science and technology studies – this list is not exclusive – to discuss, from an historical vantage point, the place of economics in our culture.

Below are some suggestions of topics that exemplify what will be at issue:

- Discussions of the interactions between art, literature and economics; for example how artists, writers have articulated more or less elaborate representations of what was the economy and/or political economy and/or some part of these.
- Studies of the interactions between cultural or artistic objects such as magazines, books, maps, photographs, paintings, graphs and economic thinking. Also, we encourage scholars to consider economic texts as cultural items, reflecting upon the consequences their form had on their reception.
- The depiction of economics as part of cultures (political, commercial, scientific, etc.) of past (including very recent past) societies; in particular, discussions of economic representations (or culture) of specific social groups such as merchants, workers, businessmen, etc.

The workshop will comprise of 5 or 6 papers containing genuine and unpublished research. If you have an interest in these topics, please send us a proposal of no more than 1000 words or a draft paper of what you want to present before December 15, 2011 at the following address: historyofeconomicsasculture@gmail.com

If you are interested in the subject but are unable to send a proposal, feel free to contact us at the same address for further discussion/information. Also, last year program is available here: http://thema.u-cergy.fr/presentation/news-21/article/cfp-histoire-culturelle-des?lang=fr
The Center for Study of Working Class Life is pleased to announce the How Class Works – 2012 Conference, to be held at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, June 7-9, 2012. Proposals for papers, presentations, and sessions are welcome until December 12, 2011 according to the guidelines below. For more information, visit our Web site at <www.workingclass.sunysb.edu>.

Purpose and orientation: The conference seeks to explore ways in which an explicit recognition of class helps to understand the social world in which we live, and ways in which analysis of society can deepen our understanding of class as a social relationship. Presentations should take as their point of reference the lived experience of class; proposed theoretical contributions should be rooted in and illuminate social realities. Presentations are welcome from people outside academic life when they sum up social experience in a way that contributes to the themes of the conference. Formal papers will be welcome but are not required. All presentations should be accessible to an interdisciplinary audience.

Conference themes: The conference welcomes proposals for presentations that advance our understanding of any of the following themes.

- The mosaic of class, race, and gender. To explore how class shapes racial, gender, and ethnic experience and how different racial, gender, and ethnic experiences within various classes shape the meaning of class.
- Class, power, and social structure. To explore the social content of working, middle, and capitalist classes in terms of various aspects of power; to explore ways in which class and structures of power interact, at the workplace and in the broader society.
- Class and community. To explore ways in which class operates outside the workplace in the communities where people of various classes live.
- Class in a global economy. To explore how class identity and class dynamics are influenced by globalization, including experience of cross-border organizing, capitalist class dynamics, international labor standards.
- Middle class? Working class? What's the difference and why does it matter? To explore the claim that the U.S. is a middle class society and contrast it with the notion that the working class is the majority; to explore the relationships between the middle class and the working class, and between the middle class and the capitalist class.
- Class, public policy, and electoral politics. To explore how class affects public policy, with special attention to health care, the criminal justice system, labor law, poverty, tax and other economic policy, housing, and education; to explore the place of electoral politics in the arrangement of class forces on policy matters.
- Class and culture: To explore ways in which culture transmits and transforms class dynamics.
- Pedagogy of class. To explore techniques and materials useful for teaching about class, at K-12 levels, in college and university courses, and in labor studies and adult education courses.

How to submit proposals for How Class Works – 2012 Conference:
Proposals for presentations must include the following information: a) title; b) which of the eight conference themes will be addressed; c) a maximum 250 word summary of the main points, methodology, and slice of experience that will be summed up; d) relevant personal information indicating institutional affiliation (if any) and what training or experience the presenter brings to the proposal; e) presenter's name, address, telephone, fax, and e-mail address. A person may present in at most two conference sessions. To allow time for discussion, sessions will be limited to three twenty-minute or four fifteen-minute principal presentations. Sessions will not include official discussants. Proposals for poster sessions are welcome. Presentations may be assigned to a poster session. Proposals for sessions are welcome. A single session proposal must include proposal information for all presentations expected to be part of it, as detailed above, with some indication of willingness to participate from each proposed session member.
Submit proposals as an e-mail attachment to michael.zweig@stonybrook.edu or as hard copy by mail to the How Class Works - 2012 Conference, Center for Study of Working Class Life, Department of Economics, SUNY, Stony Brook, NY 11794-4384.

Timetable: Proposals must be received by December 12, 2012. After review by the program committee, notifications will be mailed on January 17, 2012. The conference will be at SUNY Stony Brook June 7-9, 2012.

Conference registration and housing reservations will be possible after February 20, 2012. Details and updates will be posted at http://www.workingclass.sunysb.edu.

Labor Studies Journal - Special Issue on Labor and the Public Sphere

Labor and the Public Sphere
The Labor Studies Journal in coordination with the 2012 United Association for Labor Education Conference

The Labor Studies Journal invites paper proposals on the theme of labor and the public sphere. Recent attacks on public sector unions and collective bargaining rights have ignited a firestorm of debate and resistance, while forcing to the surface fundamental questions about the labor movement’s relationship not only to public sector workers, but to policy and institutions, public debate, the macro-economy, and democracy itself. “Austerity” agendas continue to explicitly couple attacks on labor rights (in the public and private sectors) with attacks on public education, public services, and government. At the same time, recent worker-led resistance to repressive regimes abroad has illustrated the deep relationships between labor movements and the creation of new public spheres and democratic structures.

In the context of these ongoing domestic and international struggles, we welcome papers addressing topics including but not limited to the following:

- The role of public sector unions in the political economy
- Public sector unions and public sector collective bargaining
- Responses to attacks on public sector workers, unions, or labor rights
- Unions and public life, public action, public discourse, or public institutions
- Unions and democracy, worker political organizing, civic engagement, or voter participation
- Labor and public education
- Labor and “austerity”: privatization, tax cuts, “structural adjustment,” erosion of public institutions and services, etc.
- The workplace in relation to public space: How can organizing at work relate to the transformation of democratic practices and public activism (or vice versa)?
- International comparisons or case studies

Papers submitted will be considered for presentation at the United Association for Labor Education Conference to be held in Pittsburgh, PA, March 21-25, 2012.

Papers accepted and presented at the conference will then be eligible to undergo the peer review process for possible publication in a special conference issue of Labor Studies Journal. Please send electronic copies of 3-5 pp. manuscript proposals by December 5, 2011 to the guest editors listed below.

Full-length manuscripts are expected by the time of the conference in March. Manuscripts will be peer reviewed following the conference.

4th Economic Development International Conference of GREThA/GRES

13-15 June, 2012 | Bordeaux, France | Inequalities and Development: New Questions, New Measurements

The GREThA (Research Unit 5113), the CNRS, and ESOPE Network jointly organize the 4th Economic Development International Conference. The Conference will be held at Bordeaux on 13th, 14th and 15th June 2012. This 3-days conference aims at contributing to the ongoing debates on the topic: Inequalities and Development: New Questions, New Measurements

You will find the call of papers and any additional information here: http://jourdev.gretha.u-bordeaux4.fr/

6th Annual Conference on History of Recent Economics

11-12 May 2012 | FEP-UP, University of Porto, Portugal

The Second World War and its aftermath marked a major stage in the establishment of economics as one of the dominant discourses in contemporary societies. The spread of economic ideas into many areas of social life invites mutually profitable engagements between historians of economics and historians of other social sciences. It also presents great potential for those working on the history of
In recent years we have witnessed a surging interest in the history of economics post-WWII. This new scholarship has made good use of newly available source-materials, rehearsed new methodologies for the study of the past and looked across disciplinary boundaries for insights. In its sixth consecutive year, the HISRECO conference offers a venue for review and development of this work. We are inviting submissions of papers that deal with the post-WWII era.

Our preference is for papers that place post-war economics in a broader context, whether this is parallel developments in other social sciences, politics, culture or economic challenges, though all proposals will be carefully considered. To this end, we solicit proposals from scholars trained in history, economics, sociology, or any field that may yield insights. Proposals from doctoral students and junior researchers are particularly encouraged.

If you are interested in participating, please submit a proposal containing roughly 500 words and indicating clearly the original contribution of the paper (if you have a draft of the paper, we would be happy to see that as well).

The deadline for the submission of paper proposals is 31st October 2011. Notice of acceptance or rejection will be sent by 1st December 2011 and completed papers will be due on 15th March 2012 so that we can provide feedback and then give discussants time to prepare comments. Proposals should be sent electronically to pedrotx@fep.up.pt.

The organizing committee consists of Roger Backhouse (University of Birmingham), Philippe Fontaine (École normale supérieure de Cachan and Institut universitaire de France), Yann Giraud (Université de Cergy-Pontoise), Tiago Mata (Duke University) and Pedro Teixeira (University of Porto).

CALL FOR PARTICIPANTS

Advanced Pedagogy and Course Design Workshop:
Cutting Edge Teaching Techniques and Strategies for Pluralistic Economists

January 5, 2012 (A day prior to the ASSA meetings) | Roosevelt University, Chicago

Facilitated by Dr. Geoffrey Schneider, Professor of Economics and Director of the Bucknell University Teaching and Learning Center.

Registration Fee: $25. Please make checks payable to: Teaching and Learning Center, Bucknell University. Note that you must submit the $25 registration fee to be guaranteed a spot in the workshop—space is limited and will be allocated on a first-come first-served basis.
Scholarships: A number of scholarships are available for graduate students and for untenured faculty who do not have financial assistance to attend the workshop. These scholarships have been generously provided by various heterodox associations, including URPE, AFEE, AFIT, ASE, and AJES. More details will be available shortly regarding the application procedure for scholarships.

Overview: Most heterodox economists today end up working at teaching-oriented institutions. Thus, our success in the academy often depends significantly on our ability to teach successfully. This workshop is structured for heterodox graduate students and new faculty to give them a comprehensive background in advanced pedagogical techniques and strategies that will help them succeed in the classroom. Drawing on the latest pedagogical research, the workshop will cover constructing and meeting learning objectives, syllabus design, models for pluralistic teaching, active and collaborative learning techniques, and teaching controversial topics.

9:00-9:30 Designing first day activities: establishing Customs, Connections, Community and Curiosity.
The first day of class sets the tone for the whole semester, and it is an opportunity to begin building the kind of classroom environment that you want. Participants will engage in a group activity modeling good first day activities, discuss best practices, and work on constructing their own activity that connects with their course material and that facilitates productive classroom interactions.

9:30-10:10 Constructing sophisticated learning objectives for an engaging, well-organized course.
Often the first thing that tenure and job search committees look at is your syllabus and its learning objectives. A well-organized course contains a coherent focus with sophisticated course-level learning objectives. Learning objectives should include the big ideas of the course, they should define what students should learn to do (e.g., solve a particular type of problem; understand the economic issues in a newspaper) and at what depth students should understand things. A course should also be broken down into objectives for major assignments which can be assessed. Participants will hear about best practices in constructing learning objectives and will construct some for their courses.

10:20-10:50 Course rules vs. a Welcoming Syllabus
We are often told that a syllabus is our “contract” with the students. If we don’t have an iron-clad syllabus, we open ourselves up to students taking advantage of us. But many syllabi are lifeless and hectoring, written for the few bad apples instead of the many good students. We’ll work on creating a welcoming syllabus that also protects us from problem students. We’ll also consider designing a syllabus that serves as a useful study guide for students. This is important for pedagogical purposes and because constructing a welcoming syllabus can be quite useful for the job market and for the tenure process.

10:50-11:30 Meeting learning objectives: exams, papers and assignments that facilitate learning
We all use exams, papers, assignments and other techniques for assessing how well students meet our learning objectives, but they can be dry and formulaic. We will work on constructing exams and assignments that actually help students learn material, and design rubrics to facilitate learning and to make grading easier and more systematic.

11:30-12:00 Bringing pluralism into the economics classroom I: models for pluralistic teaching.
Teaching heterodox material in the classroom can be complicated in that we sometimes face hostile colleagues or students. There are different methods for teaching heterodox economics, such as a heterodox-focused course, a multi-paradigmatic approach, or an implicitly pluralistic approach to the subject matter. Each of these comes with different opportunities and challenges. We will discuss the various approaches and determine which one suits our teaching environment and our personal style.

12:00-1:30 Lunch Roundtable: Teaching environments facing pluralistic economists
Invited guest speakers talk about their experiences teaching heterodox economics. Panelists will include: Bob Prasch, Middlebury College; Martha Starr, American University; and more. Guest speakers will offer advice for new teachers of heterodox economics. They will discuss the challenges they have faced as teachers, both from colleagues and from students, and share some of their most effective teaching strategies. After the panelists finish brief presentations, we will have an open discussion.

1:40-2:10 Pluralistic Teaching II: Strategies for Teaching Controversial Topics
There is an art to teaching heterodox ideas in ways that are welcoming to students, even those who are the children of the bourgeoisie! We will discuss some classic strategies for teaching material that may seem quite controversial to many students. It is particularly important for heterodox economists to frame material so that they are seen as open-minded and fair.

III. Classroom interactions 2:00-4:00

2:10-2:50 Active Learning Techniques for Economics Classes.
At teaching institutions today, the focus is on active, student-centered learning. We will focus on some classic active learning techniques to make the classroom more lively and to get students more engaged in the course material.

3:00-4:00 Collaborative Learning Exercises for Economics Classes
Some of the most exciting and innovative classroom exercises involve collaborative learning. During this part of the workshop, participants will participate in and learn about collaborative learning exercises designed for use in economics classes. They will begin adapting some cutting edge collaborative learning techniques for their classes.

4:00-4:10 Wrap Up and Workshop Evaluation
About the workshop leader: Geoffrey Schneider received a BA from Northwestern University and a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He is currently a Professor of Economics and Director of the Teaching and Learning Center at Bucknell University. He has co-authored two textbooks, Introduction to Political Economy and Economics: A Tool for Critically Understanding Society, and authored or co-authored articles in the Journal of Economic Issues, The Review of Social Economy, The Review of Radical Political Economics, The Forum for Social Economics, and Feminist Economics. He is an award-winning teacher, author of several articles on pedagogy, and guest editor of two special issues of the Forum for Social Economics on Teaching Heterodox Economics.

Workshop in Honour of Malcolm Sawyer

October 5, 2011 | University of Leeds, UK

The Economics Division at the University of Leeds is pleased to announce a half-day workshop in honour of Malcolm Sawyer that will take place on Wednesday October 5th 2011. The event will celebrate the many contributions that Malcolm has made to the field through his long and distinguished career and will culminate with a formal presentation of the new book Microeconomics, Macroeconomics and Economic Policy: Essays in Honour of Malcolm Sawyer.

Confirmed speakers so far include Philip Arestis and Jan Toporowski. We will gather informally over light refreshments before the workshop from 1pm to ensure a prompt start at 2pm. After the workshop we will be holding a dinner where we can all relax in a more informal environment. We would be delighted if as many of you as possible can attend. A more accurate schedule of events for the day will be made available nearer the time.

JOB POSTINGS FOR HETERODOX ECONOMISTS

Bard College, The Levy Economics Institute, US

Research Scholar

The Levy Economics Institute of Bard College invites applications for a Research Scholar who will work directly with a team of senior economists developing and maintaining stock/flow models that track the U.S. and world economies. Research will focus on the assessment of evolving economic situations, with stress on formulating strategic policy responses.
JOB QUALIFICATIONS: The successful candidate will have expertise in econometrics and macroeconomic analysis; knowledge of the flow of funds and NIPA accounts; and superb computer skills, including data and file management. A completed Ph.D. in economics is required.

APPLICATION PROCEDURE: Send letter of interest, current c.v., references, a detailed description of research activities and sample papers to: hr11021@bard.edu

Bard College is an equal opportunity employer and we welcome applications from those who contribute to our diversity. AA/EOE.

Bard College, The Economics Program, US

Two Tenure-track Positions (open rank)

In an important hiring initiative and pending budget approval, the Economics Program at Bard College invites applications for two (open rank) full-time, tenure-track positions starting in Fall 2012. One position is in Microeconomics, the other in Macroeconomics. For the micro-economics position, preferred fields include industrial organization and labor economics; for the macroeconomics position, preferred fields are monetary economics, international finance and institutional economics. The successful candidate will teach in the core curriculum areas as well as in the areas of his or her specialty. We welcome candidates that are broadly trained and interested in economic policy; the ability to teach undergraduate courses in game theory or economic history (of the U.S. or Latin America) is an advantage.

JOB QUALIFICATIONS: The successful candidate will have an active research agenda and a commitment to undergraduate teaching in the liberal arts tradition. While candidate of all ranks are invited to apply, we are especially interested in candidates with an established record of scholarship and publication. Those without a publication record are expected to have the Ph.D. completed by the time of appointment and demonstrate significant promise of scholarship.

ABOUT BARD COLLEGE: Located 90 miles north of New York City in the Hudson Valley region, Bard is a highly selective liberal arts college with a commitment to innovative teaching, interdisciplinary curricular programs and the integration of research and teaching. The Bard campus is the home of the Levy Economics Institute. The Levy Institute, which hosts conferences and seminars and publishes research on matters of economic policy, offers opportunities to faculty and students not typically available at an undergraduate college. For further information, see the program website: http://economics.bard.edu or contact Professor Sanjaya DeSilva at desilva@bard.edu (no applications to this email please).

APPLICATION PROCEDURE: Applicants should send a cover letter, curriculum vitae, three letters of recommendation, examples of published research and working papers, a statement of research interests, a statement of teaching philosophy and a summary of teaching evaluations if available. Bard College is an equal opportunity employer. Women and minorities are strongly encouraged to apply. AA/EOE. Please send all materials by electronic submission to: hr11074@bard.edu. (please indicate in subject line for which position you are applying). Paper applications are not accepted. The application deadline for pre-arranged interviews at the ASSA meetings is November 28, 2011.

Hobart and William Smith Colleges, US

Assistand Professor of Economics

Hobart and William Smith Colleges invite applications for a tenure track position at the Assistant Professor level anticipated for fall 2012. Ph.D. preferred. The position requires a specialization in political economy/history of economic thought with an emphasis in political economy of race or economic history. Teaching responsibilities for five courses per year would typically be one or two sections of principles of economics, political economy, political economy of race, and elective courses in history of economic thought/history of economics. One of the five courses could also be in the Colleges’ interdisciplinary programs or general education areas. Hobart and William Smith Colleges are a highly selective residential liberal arts institution located in a small, diverse city in the Finger Lakes region of New York State. With an enrollment of approximately 2,200, the Colleges offer 62 majors and minors from which students choose two areas of concentration, one of which must be an interdisciplinary program. Creative and extensive programs of international study and public service are also at the core of the Colleges’ mission. Hobart and William Smith Colleges are committed to attracting and supporting faculty and staff that fully represent the racial, ethnic, and cultural diversity of the nation and actively seek applications from under-represented groups. The Colleges do not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, age, disability, veteran’s status, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression or any other protected status.

Candidates should send a letter of application, c.v., evidence of successful teaching experience, and arrange to have sent to the department three recommendations. Electronic applications required, subject line political economy search.

University of Massachusetts - Boston, US

Assistant Professor, Department of Economics

- 00 Any Field
- B5 Current Heterodox Approaches
- H Public Economics
The Department of Economics at UMass Boston invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor, to begin September 1, 2012. This position will support the undergraduate major and the Department’s M.A. in Applied Economics, which focuses on urban and regional policy issues with a comparative international dimension. The M.A. program will open in fall 2012.

We are interested primarily in applicants with teaching and applied research records in urban economics and policy issues—such as public finance or state and local finance, housing and real estate markets, economics of non-profits, and/or immigration/demography, with a comparative international focus. Exceptional applicants in other policy-relevant applied fields of research will also be considered. Additionally, the applicant is expected to demonstrate an ability to secure external funding.

We are interested in candidates who include heterodox political economy, feminist approaches, applied policy analysis, or innovative methodologies in their research.

Qualifications: candidates should have a successful teaching record and the capacity to contribute to undergraduate general education, the economics major and graduate instruction. Evidence of successful teaching with diverse students is highly desirable. Candidates must have completed the Ph.D. by no later than August 31, 2012. Evidence of progress towards an excellent scholarly record is necessary.

Review of applications will begin on November 15, 2011. We anticipate preliminary interviews at the ASSA meetings in Chicago.

Send letter of application, curriculum vitae, a sample of written work, and three current letters of recommendation to: Personnel Committee, Department of Economics, University of Massachusetts Boston, 100 Morrissey Blvd., Boston, MA 02125-3393. Please include in your letter of application an explanation of how your work would complement the heterodox nature of the Department. Whitman College, US

Assistant Professor of Economics

The Economics Department of Whitman College (WA) invites applicants for a tenure-track position in Economics, with expertise in International Political Economy, at the rank of assistant professor. Effective August, 2012. A Ph.D. in economics is required.

Teaching responsibilities include courses in International Political Economy (including for example, International Trade, Development, Transitional Economics, and Immigration), and Principles of Micro and/or Macroeconomics. Other possible teaching areas include General Studies and areas that expand the Department's and the College's course offerings. Candidates should have a strong commitment to the liberal arts.

Whitman College wishes to reinforce its commitment to enhance diversity, broadly defined, recognizing that to provide a diverse learning environment is to prepare students for personal and professional success in an increasingly multicultural and global society. In their application, candidates should address their interest in working as teachers and scholars with undergraduates in a liberal arts environment that emphasizes close student-faculty interaction; how their cultural, experiential, and/or academic background contributes to diversity; and their interest in participating in the College's general education offerings as well as engaging in cross-disciplinary teaching and scholarship.

To apply, go to https://whitmanhr.simplehire.com/, click "Faculty" and "Assistant Professor of Economics (IPE)".
The online position description includes specific instructions on submission of the following materials: letter of application; curriculum vitae; three letters of reference; statements addressing the candidate's teaching interests and scholarly agenda; undergraduate and graduate transcripts; teaching evaluations or other evidence of demonstrated or potential excellence in undergraduate instruction.

Deadline: November 18, 2011 for full consideration. Interviews will be conducted at the 2012 ASSA meetings. No applicant shall be discriminated against on the basis of race, color, sex, gender, religion, age, marital status, national origin, disability, veteran's status, sexual orientation, gender identity, or any other basis prohibited by applicable federal, state, or local law.

Whitman College is a small, selective, liberal arts college dedicated to providing excellent educational opportunities for students. The College provides generous professional development support for both research and teaching.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

A Good Studio in Paris (if you are visiting for a week or so)

Dear Friends and colleagues:

I have a small Studio (30 sq. meters) in Paris, which I want to rent for small periods (between one week and three months at most). It has two separate rooms, American kitchen (plus refrigerator, dishwasher and washing machine), and is completely furnished, with capacity for four persons (one large bed and two smaller ones). It is located near the Place d’Italie (Paris 13), from which it is very easy to commute all through Paris, in the Butte Aux Cailles neighborhood. This neighborhood is a typically Parisian one, with plenty of nice restaurants, coffee shops and bars. For more information, please contact studiobutte@yahoo.com.mx

2011 Don Lavoie Memorial Graduate Student Essay Competition

The Society for the Development of Austrian Economics is pleased to announce that submissions for the 2011 Don Lavoie Memorial Graduate Student Essay Competition are now being accepted. Submissions will be accepted from advanced PhD students in economics or other relevant disciplines anywhere in the world. The competition is limited to thesis chapters and/or other research that is geared toward publication in the professional journals; submissions should adhere to appropriate standards of academic writing and should be on a topic relevant to Austrian economics. There is no word limit; and, students submitting papers to this competition will retain all publication rights to their work; however, winners are encouraged to submit their papers to The Review of Austrian Economics for possible publication.

Three prizes are given, each worth $1000, to be used to pay expenses to attend the Southern Economic Association meetings this November 19-21, 2011 in Washington, DC, where the winners will present their work on a special panel scheduled for 10:00am, Monday, November 21. Prize awards are contingent on attending the SEA meetings and the SDAE’s annual business meeting and awards banquet on Sunday evening, November 20.

The prize committee consists of:
- Peter Boettke, Committee Chair, George Mason University
- Emily Chamlee-Wright, Beloit College
- Steven Horwitz, St. Lawrence University
- David Prychitko, Northern Michigan University
- Virgil Storr, Mercatus Center at George Mason University

Deadline for submissions is October 15, 2011. Decisions will be made on or around October 20. Please include a copy of your CV with your submission. All questions and submissions should be sent electronically to David Currie at dcurrie@gmu.edu.

HES "Best Article in the History of Economics" 2011 Nominations

The History of Economics Society is pleased to invite nominations for "Best Article in the History of Economics", 2011. Any article in the history of economics or economic thought published in English in the calendar year preceding the next Annual Meeting of the Society is eligible for consideration (that is, articles published in 2011, prior to the Annual Meeting in June, 2012).

It is recognized, however, that despite official publication dates, many publications are shipped after year end. In such cases, relevant articles that are in 'proof' form, with accompanying evidence of the journal and its year of publication, may be accepted at the discretion of the Chair of the committee.

The Committee considers all nominated articles as well as all articles published in the Society’s journal: Journal for the History of Economic Thought. The committee cannot ask editors of journals for their nominations as editors, but editors may nominate in a personal capacity. Nomination of an article by its author is welcome. To nominate a dissertation for the award, please contact the chair of the committee.

Sincerely,
Steve Ziliak

Excellence Award in Global Economics Affairs 2012

Economists until the age of 35 (born 1976 or later) are invited to apply for this award by submitting up to three published or unpublished papers in the field of global economic affairs, and specifically pertaining to the following areas:
- International Trade and FDI
- Knowledge Creation and Growth
- Poverty Reduction, Equity and Development
- Environmental Policy
- Reforming the Welfare Society
Submission of a paper does not preclude publication in the standard outlets. Submitted papers may include coauthored papers. The aim of the Excellence Award is to build a community of the brightest young researchers in the area of global economic affairs.

Submitted papers will be evaluated by a jury. The top contestants will be granted the "Excellence Award in Global Economic Affairs" at a prize-giving ceremony at the Kiel Institute. In addition, they will receive a Research Fellowship at the Kiel Institute, entitling them to a research visit to the Institute, all expenses paid. Research Fellows will receive research support, access to the Institute's Virtual Research Communities and the opportunity to participate in the Institute's research projects and events.

There are four named Research Fellowships: the "Horst Siebert Fellowship", the "Porsche Fellowship", the "Landeshauptstadt Kiel Fellowship" and the "Birke Hospitality Fellowship". Further information is provided on the Excellence Award website. Staff members of the Kiel Institute and of the sponsoring organizations are not eligible for the fellowship.

Papers should be submitted as email attachment to kristina.sander@ifw-kiel.de together with a CV that includes the birth date. The submission deadline is Oct. 31, 2011.

IWW 2012 Labour History Calendar

The fantastic 2012 IWW Labor History Calendar is now available. This year's calendar features 14 photos from the Winnipeg general strike to the occupation of the Wisconsin state legislature, from the British miners' strike to a march by subcontracted Argentine workers protesting the murder of one of their fellow workers last year by gun thugs. There are dozens of new dates, and the calendar ends with excerpts from Big Bill Haywood's classic speech on the power of the general strike.

This year's calendar is published in cooperation with the Greater Kansas City General Membership Branch, which will be filling most orders. Copies are US$12 each, post-paid, or $6.50 each for 5 or more copies mailed to the same address. (please add $2 for overseas postage).

JSTOR announces availability of historical articles

I write to share exciting news: Today, we are making journal content on JSTOR published prior to 1923 in the United States and prior to 1870 elsewhere freely available to the public for reading and downloading. This content includes nearly 500,000 articles from more than 200 journals, representing approximately 6% of the total content on JSTOR.

We are taking this step as part of our continuous effort to provide the widest possible access to content on JSTOR while ensuring the long-term preservation of this important material. To date, we have primarily provided access to people through a growing base of libraries and institutions. In 1995, only ten journals were digitized and available to just a few universities. Today, millions of people from more than 7,000 institutions in 153 countries have access to journals on JSTOR through their universities, colleges, high schools, businesses, research institutions, museums, historical societies, and public libraries.

These figures convey remarkable progress and impact, but there remain many people not affiliated with institutions who are without access to JSTOR. We have taken a variety of steps over the years to serve these users. First, in 1999 we began partnering with publishers and scholarly societies to provide access to their journals to their society members and other individuals through our Individual Access Program. More than 300 journals are accessible to individuals through this program. Second, in 2006 we initiated another program—the Publisher Sales Service—to enable publishers to sell individual articles to the public on the JSTOR platform. There are 762 journals that have articles for sale through this program. Third, in 2009 we began partnering with universities and colleges to offer their alumni access to content on JSTOR. There are 18 institutions in this pilot program today.

About a year ago, we started working on a set of initiatives to test and provide additional forms of access. These initiatives include supporting publishers who wish to test different price points for articles that are part of the Publisher Sales Service; working with publishers to experiment with ways in which individuals may read some articles free of charge; and providing free access for individuals to the early journal content available through JSTOR. We are very excited about the potential for this next wave of efforts. We are confident that they will result in broader access to scholarship in the near term, and enable JSTOR and our publishers to test and develop new models that meet the wider public’s needs in the future.

I hope you share our excitement about today’s announcement. We look forward to continuing to work with you to broaden access to individuals in the future. More information about the Early Journal Content is available, including an FAQ. On a final note, I realize that some people may speculate that making the Early Journal Content free to the public today is a direct response to widely-publicized events over the summer involving an individual who was indicted for downloading a substantial portion of content from JSTOR, allegedly for the purpose of posting it to file sharing sites. While we had been working on releasing the pre-1923/pre-1870 content before the incident took place, it would be inaccurate to say that these events have had no impact on our planning. We considered whether to delay or accelerate this action, largely out of concern that people might draw incorrect conclusions about our motivations. In the end, we decided to press ahead with our plans to make the Early Journal Content available, which we believe is in the best interest of our library and publisher partners, and students, scholars, and researchers everywhere.

Please feel free to let me know if you have questions.
Tufts University’s Global Development And Environment Institute announced today that it will award its 2012 Leontief Prize for Advancing the Frontiers of Economic Thought to Michael Lipton of Sussex University and C. Peter Timmer of Harvard University. This year’s award, titled “The Global Food Crisis and the Future of Agriculture,” recognizes the critical work these researchers have contributed to the economics of food and agriculture. The ceremony and lectures will take place on April 3, 2012 at Tufts University’s Medford campus. “The current food crisis is an early indication of one of the greatest economic, humanitarian, and environmental challenges of our time,” says GDAE Co-Director Neva Goodwin. “Michael Lipton and C. Peter Timmer have been giants in the field of food and agricultural policy. Their research and writings have provided critical conceptual leadership as well as the empirical foundations necessary to address the challenges we face.”

The Global Development And Environment Institute, which is jointly affiliated with Tufts’ Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy and the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, inaugurated its economics award in 2000 in memory of Nobel Prize-winning economist and Institute advisory board member Wassily Leontief, who had passed away the previous year. The Leontief Prize for Advancing the Frontiers of Economic Thought recognizes economists whose work, like that of the institute and Leontief himself, combines theoretical and empirical research to promote a more comprehensive understanding of social and environmental processes. The inaugural prizes were awarded in 2000 to John Kenneth Galbraith and Nobel Prize winner Amartya Sen.

Warren Samuels Prize

The Association for Social Economics (ASE), one of the founding member organizations of the Allied Social Science Associations, together with the Review of Social Economy, would like to invite submissions for the 2012 Warren Samuels Prize.

This prize is awarded to a paper, presented at the January ASSA meetings, that best exemplifies scholarly work that: Is of high quality; Is important to the project of social economics; Has broad appeal across disciplines.

It is preferable, but not required, that the paper is presented at one of the ASSA sessions sponsored by the Association for Social Economics. Papers will not normally exceed 6,500 words (inclusive of references, notes), and should follow the style guidelines for the Review of Social Economy.

The winner of the prize will be announced during the ASE presidential breakfast, to which the winner is invited. The winning paper may, subject to peer review, be published in a subsequent issue of the Review of Social Economy. The winner of the Warren Samuels Prize receives a $500 stipend.

The selection committee consists of:
- A Past-President of ASE;
- A Co-editor of the Review of Social Economy (Chair);
- A member of the Editorial Board, Review of Social Economy.

This prize is awarded to a paper, being presented at the January, 2012, ASSA meetings in Chicago, Ill., in sessions not restricted to sessions in the ASE programme. Please send your paper electronically, as a word or pdf attachment, to Wilfred Dolfsma, Corresponding Editor, Review of Social Economy, before December 5th, 2011 to w.a.dolfsma@rug.nl
